Required essays:

The IMPIS program addresses global issues relevant to practitioners, policymakers, and scholars by situating those issues within the academic field of international relations. In writing the following essays, you should demonstrate your familiarity with and interest in, such issues and that field of study.

1. Personal Statement

Provide a discussion drawing upon your life experiences, career plans, and other relevant data that describes why you are interested in the IMPIS program, how you are a good fit for the program, how participating in the program relates to your personal and professional goals, how the successful completion of the program would aid your career, and what you could contribute to the program and to the success of your fellow students.

2. Program of Study

Provide a discussion which addresses to the best of your ability your academic background in international studies and international relations, the general area of international studies on which you wish to concentrate, the global issues which interest you and why, the international relations methods and theories with which you are familiar and which you are likely to employ, the courses you wish to take, the faculty you wish to work with, and possible thesis topics.

NB: Entrance into the IMPIS program is a highly competitive process. Much weight is accorded to these essays, as well as to the letters of recommendation, by the IMPIS admissions committee. Receipt of a Ministry of Education or other government scholarship is not a guarantee of admittance to the program.
